The Kelley School of Business intends to provide students with the highest quality academic experience. Courses are designed to be challenging, demanding, and to stimulate your thinking. Courses are designed to meet AACSB accreditation guidelines, and to play an important role in overall curriculum design and degree integrity. Although we are happy to say that many of our courses are fun and enjoyable, they are clearly designed to be learning experiences first and foremost.

The Kelley School of Business expects students to be treated with respect, and expects students to treat faculty, staff and fellow students with respect. Every student within a course should have an equal opportunity to learn and to have that learning assessed. Kelley expects students to take full advantage of those opportunities to learn.

This form is designed to allow you to give the Kelley School of Business feedback concerning a course or other academic activity with which you have some concerns. These concerns should be expressed in a respectful and honest manner, and will be treated seriously by the school's administration. Your privacy will be maintained to the maximum extent possible. Please answer the questions below and attach a one page letter addressed to the Executive Director describing the issues that concern you. Be as clear as possible and give examples where appropriate. Return both to the address above.
